the traumatic experiences of persecution and genocide have changed traditional views of literature the discussion of historical truth versus aesthetic autonomy takes an unexpected turn when confronted with the experiences of the victims of the holocaust the gulag archipelago the cultural revolution apartheid and other crimes against humanity the question is whether and if so to what extent literary imagination may depart from historical truth in general the first reactions to traumatic historical experiences are autobiographical statements written by witnesses of the events however the second and third generations the sons and daughters of the victims as well as of the victimizers tend to free themselves from this generic restriction and claim their own way of remembering the history of their parents and grandparents they explore their own limits of representation and feel free to use a variety of genres they turn to either realist or postmodernist ironic or grotesque modes of writing this companion first published in 2000 addresses the work of women playwrights in britain throughout the twentieth century the chapters explore the historical and theatrical contexts in which women have written for the theatre and examine the work of individual playwrights a chronological section on playwriting from the 1920s to the 1970s is followed by chapters which raise issues of nationality and identity later sections question accepted notions of the canon and include chapters on non mainstream writing including black and lesbian performance each section is introduced by the editors who provide a narrative overview of a century of women s drama and a thorough chronology of playwriting set in political context the collection includes essays on the individual writers caryl churchill sarah daniels pam gems and timberlake wertenbaker as well as extensive documentation of contemporary playwriting in wales scotland and northern ireland including figures such as liz lochhead and anne devlin
